CALLSEN CORDERO
The Los Angeles-based designer's footwear line is a blend of California style and international influences. Her designs are inspired by the vibrant colors and textures of the Southwest, as well as the intricate patterns and craftsmanship of traditional Mexican and Latin American footwear. Her boots are made from high-quality leather and feature a variety of finishes, from smooth and polished to distressed and worn-in. Her designs are both functional and fashionable, making them a staple in her collection.

Chocolater
TRINA TURK

About the Designer:
No designer embodies the effortless retro-modern chic of Southern California better than Trina Turk. This summer she collaborated with Banana Republic to seamlessly blend her signature Palm Springs-by-the-pool vibe with the brand's preppy East Coast style. Her empire, which includes eight boutiques, a mens' line (Mr. Turk), and a collection of housewares, was born out of her decades-long experience in the local apparel industry. Nearly 80 percent of her line is still produced here.

About the Model:
Hasty Torres (aka "Madame Chocolat") recently outgrew the kitchen of her Beverly Hills shop and bought a factory downtown so that she can expand production.
